To improve the algorithm, I recommend adding a deep learning model focused on matching satellite images. This would require collecting and organizing a large dataset of satellite images to train the model effectively. Currently, the algorithm may struggle by matching similar features from different areas instead of the exact location. This issue arises because similar geographic appear in various regions. By using a deep learning approach, the model can better differentiate between similar features and reduce mismatches, leading to more accurate results.